Teaching Experience

2021 – 2023 Adjunct Professor
Digging the Past (ANTH1400/CLAS3210),
Created an open and accepting course space that accommodated a variety of learning styles:

- Provided space for self-expression through directed introduction activities, space for blog-style biographies, and created space for all students to share and express ideas.
- Held one-on-one meetings with every student to develop a connection and understand their individual needs in terms of feeling safe and learning.
- Encouraged peer-based learning by dedicating time every session for group discussions and problem solving, assigning peer-reviewed projects, and creating online discussion boards to provide an additional venue for the exchange of ideas and collaborations.
- Designed assignments and examinations that provided flexibility for students to articulate their ideas. Favoured written answers over multiple choice as students are better able to communicate their understanding using this medium.
- Assigned an 'unessay' rather than a traditional essay. This assignment allowed students to research a traditional essay topic but placed no restrictions on the medium and methods they used to communicate their research findings.

- Provided extensive feedback on graded work and allowed students the option of oral rather than written examinations.
